O. L. OOWO'S HEALTH EXERCISER

A true Christianity knows that correct knowledge and not Ignorance is the mother of gennine devotion. A true Christianity welcomes truth from whatever quarter it comes and hy whatever messengev it is brought. A true Christianity cares more for truth that for tha opinions of the greatest men. She says evermore, as Jesus said to those who asked, "Master, where dwellest thou?" and as Philip said to Nathanael, who thought no good thing could come ont of Nazareth, "Come and see." She anhunits all her premises, processes sed conclusions to the full samilght of the most critical examination. She has absolutely nothing to conceal.

In the encausalo tiling at the entrance to one of his homes Lord Tennyson, we are told, had the words, "Truth against the word." A true Christianity will write these words at the head of avery sermon, on the first page of every book and on the heart of every disciple. In this spirit the church one of the control, as the child and champion of truth, will go forward fearleasly und even jeyfully to meet it.

Heathen Critics.

Consider, first, the church and her early heathen critics. I do not call them untavorable the church, as the child and champion of truth, will go forward fearleasly und even jeyfully to meet it.

Heathen Critics.

Consider, first, the church and her early heathen critics. I do not call them in his the act or are one of do. Could it be authoritatively nanounced tomorrow that God is dead they would mak no change in their systems of thought or in their methods of life. To them there is no God. Such persons were known to and characterized long ago by the pasimist when he said, "The fool hath said in his heart, no God." It was a fool who nitered the words, and even he said them in his heart rather than in his heard, for the heart of even a fool knew better. Athelam of whatever kind is a Irecting void, an erctic hreath, a lifeless life. It has uninceptione an Iransfertu were he history of Christianity. They fiereely ettacked the church. They created greet consternation. No doubt

A Pisseer Critte.

Next comes Celans. Ihis history is involved in obscentity, but he was born probably early in the second century, it is vulgar jibes and ribaid criticians remind as of Thomas Paine of a much later day. He is the reputed anthor of the work entitled "A True Discourse," which wes written against Judnism and Christianity. We would know ulmost nething of his writings were it not for Origen, who, though he knew little of Celsus himself, wrote vigorously against his methods and conclusions. In so doing he quoted many parts of his opponent's arguments and thus has seet them down to ancceeding generations.

It is almost certain that Celans was a Platonist and quite certain that he was a man of tuneh judisoopidical learning and of equal critical nibility. It discovered and declared anny of the objections to Christianity which its ablest opponent menilom and nunhasize today. In several important matters he anticipated the theories of Mr. Darwin, Strictly speaking, he was not an atheist; he believed in a supreme God. Its believed in ning and that a supreme God. Its believed in loriginal uncreated matter as the source of all evil, but he denied a supernatural will and linal aims or consess. These was nothing but Involvilleu and eyolelion of veason and matter. These prin-

the gospel is tanght. This method of opposition he devised. Lundan and Colsus did not attack the gospel records. He anticipated, perhaps he neggested, mathods which are common in our own day. About the year 370 in Biedly, having gons there after a fit of deep mainanchy, during which he attempted to take his own life, he wrote 15 books against Christianity. Hu might as woll have attempted to climb to the sky and hlow out the sun. He simply succeeded in making his name hated by Christians far and near. Thirty defender leaped into the nrena to do battle for Christ and his truth. Jesus Christ, not Forphyry, is king. He weare the royal purpin and the crown of glory and bears the palm of victory. A Bettilant Critie.

We now come to one of the most inter-

Attention must be directed, in the second place, to some of the scientific critica. To a truescisuce no Christian teachnr can object, and established truth of science is as much a trulh in its place and for its purpose as any statement of revelation. All trus discoveries of science are revelations of the thought of God.
Every truth of mathematics is to be honored as fully in its place as a truth of revelution. This thought gives honer and glory to the study of sines and cosines of angles and triangles. Many Christians have made mest unfortunate opposition to scientific discoveries. All such discoveries are to be honored as revelations of the cternal miled.
It is only to a science falsely so called elutions of the cternal miled.

It is only to a selecco falsely so called that we object. Truth is one, and the revelation of God in science cannot contradict the revetation of God in Scripture. Genesis and geology, rightly interpreted, must teach the same grent principles. There may be contradictions between our interpretations of God's book of ravelations, but the contradictions are in our interpretations of list book of revelations, but the contradictions are in our interpretations and not in the divine revelations. There are scientific critics who are opposed to Christ and his cause, to the church and Christianity. But for the most part they are men who have not profoundly studied either the bistory of the principles of our holy veligion. They have been occupied largely, if not exclusively, with thele own accientific investigations.

Darwin is a melaucholy example of this class. At one time he was broad in his investigalious and varied in bis attainments, but has devoted himself eaces clusively to his specialities that he became narrow and painfully bigoted. He himself tells us that a page of Shakespeare "mauseated" him, and that music gave him exquisite pair rather than pleasure. To use a word which has become common the certain scientific treaties, many of his nobler faculties became atrophied.

Cheislian Chasaptans.

With the exception of Hingh Miller, no om did inore to help sciance in one day than did Agussis. Purhaps no other introduced and trained so many young and enthusiastion naturalists. Whippla was right when he said of Agussis, "His was not only a scientific thinker, hat a scientific force." Similar honor is due to Gnyot, who honored his native country, Switzerland, and his adopted country, Switzerland, and his adopted country, Switzerland, and his adopted country. America, slike by his great learning and noblincharactor. Hagava honor to America and 10 seisene throughout the world.

The Wisdom al he Serpeal.

In many of the houses in the villages in Egypt a sanke is kept as a guardian of the dwelling. These creatures are field on milk and eggs and are well taken care of. At night the thing is seen coming out of their love for food, and though they often have to envise the bodies of the aleeping in mates they never think of harming them. Sullid a oftenger sanke appear, it is was critically a sulling the contraction.

A guardian snakoonro intsect its tember nate, and thinking it had been slain by some one in the house determined to be requed. Accordingly it slipped unseen into the water jar and poisoned the water. Ity and by the formale came in quite lively, and her ford discovered he had made a mistake. What was to be done now? It the family drank of the winter, they would all be poisoned. Creeping into its bowl of milk, it afterward crawled about moong the dust on the ground until its body was covered with dirt clotted by the milk. Then it went into the water jar. Of sourse the dust dirtied the water, and the people saw that the snake had been in the jar, and the watee was therefored angrenous. So it was poured away and the jac broken. They say the scripett in wise, mil this on. It least displayed something more than wisdom, if we may believe the story.

Some of the Newst Fode and Fashione of the Wedding Season.

The morning hour is the ooe usually preferred by fashionable persons, who are supposed to lead in these matters of form and ethquette. Before 12 most the bride in married in church, and after the ceremony a wedding breakfast is served to the livited guests at her own home.

In England the hidde users wears a dress which is cut open at the threat. Here, on the condimy, even in the morning, brides uften appear in full dress—that is, low neck bodiese. A will be worn or oot, according to taste, but a pretty custou in to wear the vell uver the face until after the ceremony, when the groom lifts it, and the bride leaves the church with the velt thrown back. The matter of bridesimalide or makes of home is also in thing which every one may decide for herself.

It is considered vulgar here to display the wedding gifts with the eards of these sending them attended. This only excites prominent and often gives rise to disagreemide remarks. If the gifts are shown in all, the cards should be runoved.

A now fad has lately keen introduced from England that gioves shall not be worn at weddings by the bride and groom. This undoubtedly areas from the fact that some high born lady once forgot her gioves cach side of the chancel, and joining in the middle nilse wall down to meet the bride and her father. FROM GLASS HOUSES: ANGEROUS PLACES OUT OF WHICH

In the ways of truth and righteomoses. If it to true that every hame hilleneed works its way into the heart of child hood and then works itself unt again in the subsequent development of character, what can be expected of persons whose childheod and youth were spent in a lame where the intellectual dieconsisted childy of novels in which religion and morality are succeed at mad the heroes and heroines are part and women who illustrate their lack of virtue and failfr in God by living only for sensuous and ryanescent pleasures?

Wu all know the fondness of children for pictures and statuary, and we know also that art has much to do with the formation of a child's tasin and in giving morol tone and color to his mind. The sentiment of Robert lagersoll, horrowed from the infidel sensualists of Europs, that "in criticising art all chical principlus must be ignored," is rapidly become, a dominant sentiment in themsands of American homes. There are immoral pictures, and the latter are often made our children familiar with such indecency is to corrupt their minds and segradu their livis. If you want to see the offsets of climinating chical principles both freta art and literature, go to France. Gu to Park, which is notly called "that Coriuth of meden Emope," it would not fall to mention that rlass of most and women to be found in every community whose rharacteristic wick-needs the minds our children familiar with such indecency is to corrupt their minds and segradu their livis. If you want to see the offsets of climinating chical principles soft free art and literature, go to France. Gu to Park, which is nptly called "that Coriuth of meden Emope," if we have a faith in God and brilliant, have at faith in God and brilliant in the soul of the principles and facts presented in ment. While I concede that there are aumerous axceptions to the rule among them, and that there are no higher illustrations of Christian fulth and virtus than can be found even in the very heart of Paris, I confidently and unhestatingly, affirm that it is the most immoral city in the civillized world. These are the people who rule the world of fashion; these are the people who rule the world of fashion; these are the people whom our society circles allow to teach them home decoration and what tu read and how to annuse themselves; these are the people and yet they are orither punished by the stain ore criticaled by yearde whit claim to be the very cream of our social life.

The Victims of Aracles.

Look also at the human lires that are sacrificed by men to graffy their greed of gold. Go into a great factory, the projecty of nulliformic who revels in anury, and you will find rall women and delicant children standing all the day long in a recon whose atmosphere is beden with poisonous impurities and patiently but painfully toiling for vages that are barely sufficient to prevent starvation. In Gol's record book the mana for such cruelty and inlumently is muriler.

I would not fall to mention that rlasof men and women to be found in every community whose rharucteristic wickeduses is slander. Their purposes is to elevant themselves on the ruin of others.
Where they are too cowardly for open assault they secretly bedinm and blacken the reputation of their political or commercial or social competitors. When you destroy the good neare of a good man, you destroy hins, and such destruction is nurder.

If there be one among you in the light of the principles and facts presented in this discussion feels that he is absolute 12-discussed in the same that it is 12-discussed in the race of life. Seeing bow much of the essence of sin and crime thereis in our own hearts and lives, seeing how we have tolerated and even hoursed and oxalted usen who, according to divine law, are as guilty as those upon thous in the state has hald its iron hand and dragged to the bar of justice, and, knowing how feelily we have epposed the assumes and influences which corrupt the minds and lives uf new and humy them to disgraces and ruin, what ough to be our spirit and attitude toward those who have been branded as criminals and outcasts? What treatment of them does Christianity require undrastianity does not registre us to spolcity and this state demand? These are very practical questions. Lecause the class referred to is large—very large—
